

A list of 22 names that have parallels in both the Hebrew Bible

I've compiled a list of 22 names that have parallels in both the Hebrew Bible and Hindu texts, and what's intriguing is that they appear in the same sequence in both narratives:

1. Elohim, whose creative power is denoted by "B-R-" in the Bible, has a parallel in Brahman in Hindu texts, also denoted by "B-R."
2. Adam, the first man in the biblical narrative, is parallel to Swayambhu Manu, who is said to have been self-created.
3. Eve, meaning "life" in Hebrew, is parallel to Shatrupa, the wife of Swayambhu Manu, whose other name, Tanu, also means "life."
4. Cain, meaning "spear," has a parallel in Indira, also meaning "spear."
5. Abel's connection with "vapor" finds a parallel in Vritra's connection with water.
6. Noah, also known as Manowach, is parallel to Manu. It's worth noting that there are two Manus in Hindu texts, with Swayambhu Manu parallel to Adam and Vaivasvat Manu parallel to Noah.
7. Arphaxad finds its parallel in Ikshwaku.
8. Shelach, meaning "to sprout," corresponds to Pithu, who "milked the earth."
9. Eber, meaning "the region beyond," has a parallel in Sagar, meaning "expansion of the sea."
10. Peleg, meaning "the channel," corresponds to Bhagirath, who made a channel for the river.
11. Reu in the Bible finds its parallel in Raghu in Hindu texts.
12. Serug is parallel to Shighrag.
13. Nahor corresponds to Nahush.
14. Terah finds its parallel in Dasaratha.
15. Abraham, originally Abram, stands for "father," and parallels with Ram in the Hindu text.
16. His wife Sarah corresponds to Sita,
17. and his brother Haran to Bharat.
18. Lot's nephew, Moses' father Amram, means "exalted people,"
19. while Krishna's father Vasudev means "excellent people."
20. Moses' mother Jochebed means "Jehovah is glory,"
21. and Krishna's mother Devaki means "divine and celestial."
22. Moses' brother Aaron parallels with Krishna's brother Balarama.

These 22 proper names appearing in the same narrative sequence in Hindu texts offer compelling evidence, compared to only two such names found in both the Bible and Egyptian sources.