

Revelation of God – love is undeniable by law – by Michael Martiensen

On the 25th of October 2003 God asked me to use my knowledge of his laws to be divorced having received a telepathic offer of love from my true love Hannah (a work colleague) on the 17th October 2003 which I'd accepted, as I was married to Maria whom I discovered had unwittingly deceived me in love though she was only obeying law (it turns out) because I loved her. I failed to know the answer to God's question and panicked for realising that if I failed to die I would deny love and break law. I offered my life knowing death was the end of the law of marriage but God would not take it without a reason. So God let the devil help me. The devil said "God is love and it is love you want so tell God you want to love him and he will separate you for the first commandment is greater than the second. If he refuses then he'll have given you a law you cannot obey." I agreed to this and repeated to God what the devil said to me. God kindly divorced me by killing me but in the process he gently whispered to me that he cannot deny himself. After I died I said to God that I only wanted to love and be loved and God replied that that was all he wanted so I was pleased and relieved. Then I saw Jesus.

I spent what seemed to be an age somewhere in eternity with Hannah when one day God called me and showed me his creation of time and the earth and said its purpose is near completion and he asked me if I'd like to help him. I jumped at the chance to help God so God gave me new life and sent me back to earth exactly at the point I'd left it, but with memory of my experience. It began to dawn on me the significance of my encounter with God and the devil. I realised that I had unwittingly lied to God. I was distraught for years after. God justified me: he brought to my attention a quote by John G. Diefenbaker namely "Freedom gives the right to be wrong. Not to do wrong!" which alleviated my bad conscience. However, I still did not really understand the answer to the question God had originally asked me to be divorced so I decided to think about this all the more. It transpires that to be denied love breaks law and is sin so it follows that to deny love also breaks law and is sin, according to Jesus Christ's two commandments. So we can say that the denial of love is prohibited by law which can be reworded to "love is undeniable by law." This is the reason behind the commandments and upholds true love for we want to love and be loved. My faith in Jesus led me to the truth of love i.e. true love.

Further detail can be found on my website <http://www.endtime.hpage.com>.